Classic Alpaca Peru

Earns World Fair Trade Organization Certificate

Recently, Classic Alpaca's Peru team became World Fair Trade Organization (WFTO) certified. This coveted distinction was designed to positively impact the livelihoods of workers, producers and consumers by proving that all member businesses comply with ten guiding WFTO principles.

Since 2003, Peru and U.S.-based Classic Alpaca has been selling quality alpaca goods across the world. In 2009, they started a production workshop in Huancayo, Peru and now they employ more than 80 artisans in the area. They also run a full production facility in Lima, have show rooms in Lima and Huancayo and sell wholesale in the U.S.

Run by husband-and-wife team Chris McCue, an American, and Carla, a Peruvian, the company has a strong following inside and outside the alpaca community and can be seen at many North American alpaca shows and events with a full complement of styles and an extensive inventory.
